World Radio Day

on February 9th, 2021

February 13 marks World Radio Day, a day dedicated by UNESCO to celebrate one of the most accessible and reliable forms of communication.

Even though smartphones and social media platform usage are ubiquitous among today's news consumers, many still turn to the radio for timely and reliable information. It is particularly important in Canada where the winters are long and vast distances stretch between fragmented populations. As a tribute to radio's role as a linchpin to our democracy, we've curated three interactive news programs from Radio Canada International, the voice broadcasting Canada's point of view to the world.
